GRAND MASTER'S MESSAGE

JAMES H. GIBSON
Grand Master 2021-2022

Greetings Brothers! We are now 6 months into this wonderful year. Just six months ago, we were installing our Officers for the ensuing year. I distinctly remember as I installed the Masters of so many Lodges in December and January, how important it was to commit to his keeping the three great lights of Masonry and the furniture of the lodge. No, I don't mean the chairs or the altar, I am referring to the Holy Bible, Square & Compasses, the Rule, the Line, the Constitution, the Charter, and the By-Laws of the Lodge.

If you've attended an installation, I am hopeful that you heard the Installing Master cite the importance of these various items. There is no esoteric secret being divulged here as many have heard this, both Masons and non-Masons alike. The item I want to particularly focus on in this month's article is the Constitution, or better yet, YOUR Constitution. The reason I refer to it as yours is because you wrote it. Every article, every resolution, every sub-section has been presented by, voted on, and approved by you, the Grand Craft of Kentucky. That is what makes this document so special! You have the ability and the inherent responsibility to govern yourself by your own rules and regulations. As a Grand Lodge Officer, I along with the other Officers, are duty bound to protect and enforce your rules that you created and ratified. When the Master-elect is presented with a copy of the Constitution at his installation, he is charged to, "Cause it to be read frequently, that none may pretend ignorance of the important precepts which it enjoins." It is his responsibility to make his members aware of the laws, rules, and regulations that govern them.

To give you a brief history of the Book of Constitutions, let's look back over the years as it evolved into what it is today. I stumbled upon a book of proceedings from 1864, and in the very back of the book was published the Constitution, By-Laws, and Rules of Order consisting of only 4 Articles pertaining to Grand Lodge Officers, 3 Articles for subordinate Lodges, a list of 13 general regulations, and 24 By-laws and Rules of Order. However, it seemed that prior to 1975, every time an issue arose with the craft, new articles were drafted to deal with just about everything, culminating into over 400 articles. Afterwards, the Book of Constitutions was rewritten similar to today's version, becoming a more fluid document as it evolved over the last several years. Ultimately, it was revised again, making articles more uniform in its references and easier to follow. I want to charge you to continually study the Book of Constitutions so that you may be better informed and can face the challenges and pitfalls that can periodically plague your lodges.

I want to thank each of you for entrusting me with protecting the sanctity and enforcing the laws you put into existence. It truly is a privilege to work for you. Over the years that I have served you, I have been presented with a wide variety of issues, concerns and questions. I know that sometimes it may be difficult to understand why I give certain answers or make specific decisions involving the craft and the business of the Grand Lodge, but rest assured, all decisions lie with the boundaries of the Constitution so that everyone is treated fairly and equally. You have elected me to represent you, all of you, to the best of my ability, and I take very seriously this awesome responsibility, because you, the Grand Craft are worth it. The two most important books we have are the Book of Constitutions and the Holy Bible. One gives us the passion, love, grace and understanding to support and enforce the other. May God continue to bless you all!

Fraternally Thine,
James H. Gibson

Letter from The First Lady of Ky Masonry

As First Lady of KY Masonry, I have traveled across our great state in my continued commitment to bring awareness of Human Trafficking. The response from Masons, their families, and our friends has been absolutely phenomenal. The outpouring of support from the Masonic lodges has been truly humbling and it has been such an honor for me to witness Masonry at its finest.

My program, "Be the Key", which refers to bringing awareness of the issue of human trafficking has reached thousands. The donations from Masonic lodges and individuals to assist the PATH Coalition (people against trafficking humans), in their quest to help fight this atrocity has been astonishing.

The pin in the shape of a key is being worn by hundreds and the numbers grow daily. It represents that now you are aware and you will not be silent about the horror of human trafficking.

Thank you for inviting me to your lodges and meetings to speak; thank you for the heartfelt donations and for wearing the pin. Thank you so very much for your words of encouragement and your kindness everywhere I go.

Together, we will Be the Key. God bless you,
Sam Gibson, First Lady of Masonry of KY

Challenging Freemasonry

The other day I was having lunch with my Masonic mentor. During our conversation, I mentioned in casual conversation the name of a Brother whom I knew was not much of a reader. I told my mentor that I could understand it if a person tried to gain education in a different way, as we all learn differently. Much to my surprise, his response became the topic of this article. My mentor explained that while you can certainly get education from other areas, he gently reminded me that as Masons we are taught to challenge ourselves to include taking the time to read. It became clearer to me, in that moment, that I was making excuses for my Brother and enabling him to do less, rather than challenging him to be more. How often do we do this to our Brothers and ourselves? What do we gain with just doing the bare minimum? Will our rough ashlar ever be smooth with just a “good enough” approach to Freemasonry? The thought of being ordinary has never been the focus of Freemasonry, unless the tagline of “Making Good Men Better,” is just a hollow statement of truth.

Throughout our Masonic journey, we are taught, especially in the Fellowcraft Degree, that learning is an integral part of our growth as a man. Most of us can recall the stair lecture and its focus on the seven liberal arts and sciences, and the instruction to use this education to seek further light and develop our minds. Our Masonic forefathers believed that our educational growth was so important that a specific degree was designed around it. If this is to be true, then why have we abandoned our quest for education and challenging our minds? In short, we have become distracted and intellectually lazy. Men of today’s society want quick information, and the thought of serious study and contemplation distracts from moving on to the next piece of mental entertainment. If our Masonic desire is knowledge, then we are currently coming up well short of that ideal. Dudley Wright in his 1924 book, The Ethics of Freemasonry, wrote the following, “A thorough knowledge of this history, philosophy, and science of Freemasonry should and ought to be the ambition of every member of the Craft, and when he has studied and is well versed in these subjects, he can truthfully answer the question: What came you here to do?”

The ultimate quest for any Mason is best expressed in the phrase, “know thy self.” It is the quintessential design on our Masonic trestleboard, and from it we learn who and what we are, and all the while we are getting closer to our Creator. But how many Brothers take the time to really contemplate this very personal and spiritual endeavor? Knowing ourselves will not just come from our memorization of ritual, nor will it come from multiple charitable acts. We cannot rely on the perceptions of others to enlighten us as to who we are. To do so is to rely on all their own ideas, thoughts, biases, and so on. However, many Brothers look to others for validation of self-worth, which ultimately can sow the seeds of fear and self-doubt, getting us no closer to understanding who we are deep down inside. Where will enlightenment come from? It will be revealed by a deeper understanding of your being and relationship with your God. The tools to do this are all around us in Freemasonry. The intense study of our symbolism and philosophies will lead to contemplation and critical thinking. In time, this study will reveal our true nature and complete Freemasonry’s promise of becoming a better man.

In the end, we can look to our Entered Apprentice Degree for some guidance in challenging ourselves. We are told that in our leisure we should strive to improve our Masonic knowledge. This statement is imparted to us early in our Masonic journey, as it sets the tone for what we need to do as builders of the Craft, and, more especially, ourselves. Our knowledge will not miraculously come merely being a member of this fraternity, nor will it come from wearing a ring. The true work of Freemasonry will come from our diligent efforts of contemplative study and critical thinking about our history, philosophies, and the secrets revealed to us from our symbolic form of instruction. Those who choose not to follow this path will learn that there are consequences for their actions that will ultimately lead to a life of intellectual decay and the perpetual darkness of ignorance. This article is not meant to answer all the questions, but it is call to action to start the conversation on how best we can challenge ourselves. Will you heed this call and take on this most important endeavor?

ANCIENT & ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE - ORIENT OF KENTUCKY

Brethren,

What do we say to a non-mason when asked “What is Freemasonry “? Do we shuffle our feet, squirm a bit or like around for imaginary help? The answer to this question is paramount to the survival of Freemasonry. The worst answer I have ever heard is “it’s a secret and I can’t tell you”.

How many men have been turned off from our Craft when answered in this way or by something similar?

Who’s fault is it? We teach our initiates about the symbolism of Freemasonry, the lessons concerning Faith, Hope and Charity, but what Degrees, Allegories or education have we given them about answering that age old question. I do believe it is partially the responsibility of each Mason to better education one’s self about our Fraternity and what we can say, but more of those lessons need to be taught in the Lodge room. Each Lodge needs to have educational meetings to better prepare a newly made Mason on what can be said outside of the Lodge.

Please remember this very informative website “BeAFreemason.org”. It explains in detail to a non- mason what our Fraternity is all about.

The better educated our Fraternity is, the better our future will be. Take care and may God Bless!

Sincerely and fraternally,
Terry L. Bowman, PGM, 33°
SGIG, Orient of Kentucky

It has been wonderful this year traveling around Western Kentucky going to the different Scottish Rite Club meetings. In some of the Valleys such as Louisville, there is a tradition of the clubs meeting on New Year’s Day. They hand out new commemorative glasses and toast the start of a New Year in the Scottish Rite.

In the past, the brothers in Western Kentucky could get their glasses at the Consistory in Madisonville, but I made the decision to try something different. With the hope of increasing attendance at the Club meetings, I have been bringing the glasses to the clubs.

Below is a picture taken at the Bowling Green Scottish Rite Club meeting held May 1, 2022. This is the first time the club has met in four years. Congratulations guys on rebuilding your club, and thank you Illustrious Sir Terry Bowman, SGIG, PGM for attending the meeting.

May God bless you with health and prosperity,

Douglas W. Bunch, 32° KCCH Personal Representative

MASONIC LIBRARY AND MUSEUM ASSOCIATION
COVINGTON SCOTTISH RITE

"I Didn't Know That....."

"Freemasonry, a self-improvement course", is always an inadequate statement when describing its gift to man. Man has consistently sought to improve himself, by acquiring an understanding of human nature and the purpose of life in his search for God. Freemasonry aids man in doing so. Through a mastery of its ritual and symbols, one can comprehend the world around him, as well as the heavenly world above him.

"As above, so below" in Hermetic philosophy was a concept of the mystery schools. Based on the writings of Hermes Trismegistus (Thrice Great Hermes), the 'Emerald Tablet' where this expression is first found, was translated in the twelfth century, from Arabic text into Latin. The Emerald Tablet is a writing of alchemy (al = the; chemy = chemistry). During the Enlightenment, philosophical and scientific greats, such as Sir Isaac Newton studied the Emerald Tablet and other "secret writings of the ancients" in hopes of finding a forgotten philosophy or a great truth. Although varying interpretations exist to its true meaning, the basic concept of "as above, so below" is that God made man and his surroundings in His own image, and God made the heavens also in His image, and therefore what happens in one, would necessarily happen in the other.

Many ancient structures around the world (think of the pyramids) were aligned with the fixed stars, while other ancient structures such as Stonehenge, detailed the occurrence of the four changes of the season. Both the March and September equinoxes defined the two days of equal daylight and night, while the solstices known as the two St. Johns' Days, in June and December measured the longest and shortest days of the year. Knowing the seasonal changes would allow for planning work projects, hunting, planting and harvesting. Webb's Masonic Monitor of 1797 reads "Astronomy is that divine art by which we are taught to read the wisdom, strength and beauty of the almighty Creator in those sacred pages, the celestial hemisphere." One can easily see how Astronomy, one of the seven liberal arts, would be used by the ancients to foretell future events.

Some great minds believe the symbolic degrees of Freemasonry are remnants of a philosophical or spiritual 'mystery school', and others of equal intelligence believe it unproven. The symbolic degrees do not teach the premise, however by making a study of its symbols and rituals, one can become aware of his own search, within himself, for truth.

The 'higher' degrees are just such a study. It is around the year 1740 that the Royal Arch Degree is believed first introduced (possibly from Scots Master Lodges of the early 1730's). A spiritual view can be interpreted throughout the ceremony and "Holiness to the Lord" is one of the principle by-words of the formalities. In the same time frame the Royal Order of Scotland, a self-proclaimed Masonic Rosicrucian Knighthood, came into focus. The York Rite's cryptic Royal Master is also in this time frame. The Scottish Rite has a goodly number of such degrees, the Rose Croix perhaps being the most prominent.

The Christian Mysteries of the early church certainly became a popular study in the 17th and 18th centuries through the Rosicrucian Order and other such groups. In spite of Anderson's Constitutions of 1723, which declared to admit men of the "Religion in which all Men agree, leaving their particular Opinions to themselves, that is good Men and true, or Men of Honor and Honesty by whatever Denominations and Persuasions they may be distinguish'd"; Christian symbolism remained in the three degrees of Masonry well into the 19th century, and Christianity is a requirement for membership in the masonic Order of Knights Templar and numerous York Rite side degrees.

It appears however, the Jewish Religion has given the most to the degrees of Freemasonry. Nearly all of the significant words are Hebrew and the emphasis on King Solomon's Temple is carried forth by both the York and Scottish Rites. Lodge symbolism led to an interpretation of Jewish Kabbalah and the "Tree of Life" and entered early in the German Lodge system and later in the French 'high' degrees. Masonic symbolism does lend itself to be interpreted esoterically.

In both the 18th and 19th century, authors such as Hutchinson, Preston, Pike and Oliver published admirable writings on moral, philosophical and spiritual Masonry. In the late 19th and early 20th century perhaps the scholarly mystics C.W. Leadbeater, Manly P. Hall, Arthur Edward Waite and Walter L. Wilmhurst were the most read and lead to popular Masonic discussion groups on morality, philosophy and spirituality. Today, authors Tobias Churton, Timothy Hogan, Jamie Paul Lamb, Angel Millar and W. Kirk MacNulty are perhaps the most appreciated on this subject; by the small but increasing number of Masons .

The mid-20th century decline in philosophical/mystical writings was partly due to a British fellow named Aleister Croley (1875-1947), who called himself the Beast of 666 and the press labeled him as 'the wickedness man in the world'. He was a practitioner of black magic, lived a decadent life and gave occultism (hidden knowledge) a bad name. Although often referred to as a Freemason particularly by anti-masons, it is very doubtful. He is not recorded as a member on the Grand Lodge of England's books as a member. He did belong to a great deal of similar organizations as well as a multitude of occultist societies, including the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and Ordo Templi Orientis. After claiming to be visited three times by an angel of the Lord, he founded the religious philosophy of Thelema, which practiced sex magic mixed with religion under the philosophy of "Do What Thou Wilt". Aleister Croley today remains a large influence on occultism, but fortunately he has never been known to belong to any recognized Masonic organization.

Today, authors such as Margaret Jacob, Professor of History – University of California; David Harrison, History Lecturer – University of Liverpool; Alain Bauer - Professor of Criminology, Paris, New York and Beijing; David Stevenson – Director, Centre of Scottish Studies, University of Aberdeen; Patrick Mendis - John Hopkin's University, George Mason University; Professor John Dickie - University College, London; and other prominent scholars, have given credence to Freemasonry and its philosophies through their popular books, doing much to disarm the anti-masons. Anti-masonry may have subsided to some degree, never the less, sadly, it will again raise its ugly head.

Veterans Corner

It was the first major conflict of the Cold War as the Soviet Union supported North Korea and the United States supported South Korea.

About 86,300 Korean War veterans are women, which makes up 7% of the estimated number of all female veterans.

The United States spent around $67 billion on the war.

The United States sent about 90% of the troops that were sent to aid South Korea.

The Korean War began on 25 June 1950 when North Korea invaded South Korea.

Approximately 3 million people died in the Korean War, the majority of whom were civilians, making it perhaps the deadliest conflict of the Cold War-era.
